Allison Zmuda's Visit to Inventure Academy

Inventure has been engaging with Allison Zmuda, world renowned education consultant and author, to leverage her expertise in personalized learning and curriculum storyboards. As Inventure's mentor in our New England Association of Schools and Colleges accreditation (NEASC) journey, she has been working with us remotely since 2020 bringing our Definition of Learning (DoL) to life. Allison has been coaching us on being more deliberate in our practice to create enhanced student curiosity, engagement and accountability.

During her visit to Inventure earlier this month, Allison guided teachers through innovative approaches to foster engagement and autonomy in their classrooms to empower our learners to make informed choices about what they learn, how they learn, and how they can demonstrate their learning in their journey to become changemakers of tomorrow! Additionally, she helped subject leads design the Course Planner as a way to involve both students and parents in the way learning flows through the academic year.

Publishing at the Middle School, Yeshwanthpur Campus

The Writing Workshop at Inventure Academy, Yeshwanthpur, is thoughtfully designed to ignite the creativity of our learners. Through this workshop, learners deepen their storytelling abilities, refine their writing techniques, and build confidence as they develop their unique voices as writers. Over the course of each writing unit, they enhance their skills, stimulate their creativity and imagination, and develop a strong sense of self-expression. The workshop not only fosters a passion for reading and writing but also encourages collaboration and peer interaction. At the culmination of the workshop, learners have the exciting opportunity to publish their work, showcasing the skills and knowledge they have acquired.

This week, our Middle School learners successfully completed their first Publishing, a milestone met with pride and enthusiasm. As they shared their work with an eager audience of parents and peers, their faces lit up with a sense of accomplishment. The parents were deeply moved by the quality and creativity of their children's writing, and expressed immense pride in the visible improvement in their ability to articulate thoughts and emotions on paper. Many parents reflected on how this structured Writing Workshop, which they did not have in their school days, has been instrumental in nurturing disciplined, confident, and expressive young writers. This experience not only highlighted the growth of our students' writing skills but also underscored the lasting impact of the workshop on their development as thoughtful, creative individuals.

"Discovering the Wonders of Nature": Our Kindergarteners' from Whitefield-Sarjapur go on their first Field Trip

The air was filled with excitement as our little explorers embarked on their very first field trip of the year. Our Kindergarten learners, Pre-K and K1, were thrilled to visit a nearby nursery. In the weeks leading up to the trip, we had been exploring the 'World Around Us' in our classroom, learning about plants, flowers, and the origins of fruits and vegetables. The nursery visit was the perfect opportunity to bring our learning to life.

To our delight, the children even recalled the names of some of the flowers they had learned about in their books, when they saw them upfront in the nursery. They made wonderful connections between their classroom learning and their real-world experiences.

The trip was a resounding success, filled with laughter, learning, and unforgettable memories. Our young explorers returned to school with a newfound appreciation for the natural world.
